How can I best manage confidential documents?

Personal and sensitive business data is often classified as private or confidential, and should be securely processed to make sure it stays that way – but is this always the case?

What measures can your organization take to ensure confidential data stays confidential? We've compiled some tips and considerations to help you manage and dispose of private and personal documents.

FAQ - How Should I Manage Confidential Waste?

Conduct a waste audit to enable you to find the best waste management solutions for your building or premises. Your waste audit should cover:

- Areas on site where confidential waste is generated
- The quantity of this waste in each given area
- The people required to oversee the collection and disposal of your confidential documents

Once your waste audit is complete, you can then proceed to selecting the right confidential waste bin for your organization.

Key considerations include:

Security, Style, Capacity, Location

FAQ - How Can I Securely Dispose of Confidential Waste?

All confidential waste should be collected and destroyed separately from any non-confidential waste before it can be recycled. Empty your confidential shredding bins into security bags which you can securely seal prior to shredding or collection by a waste contractor.
